

Supported by

WESTERN UNION

MONEY TRANSFER

Kabaslot N Kotoku Productions, celebrating black history presents Kolosa John Kargbo's play...

Let Me Die Alone

The life & times of
Madam
Yoko

Sat 1st Nov 08 at 8pm prompt.

Box Office: 020 8690 0002

Book Online: www.broadwaytheatre.org.uk Tickets: £15.00
(Special discounts for family bookings: Call 07931 767 444.)

DONT MISS THIS GREAT PLAY ABOUT AN EVEN GREATER LADY!

Supported by

WESTERN
UNION |
MONEY TRANSFER

Madam Yoko (Mammy Yoko) was a brilliant and ambitious woman who used her friendship with the British to gain control of Kpaa Mende, but in the end that very friendship may have destroyed her.

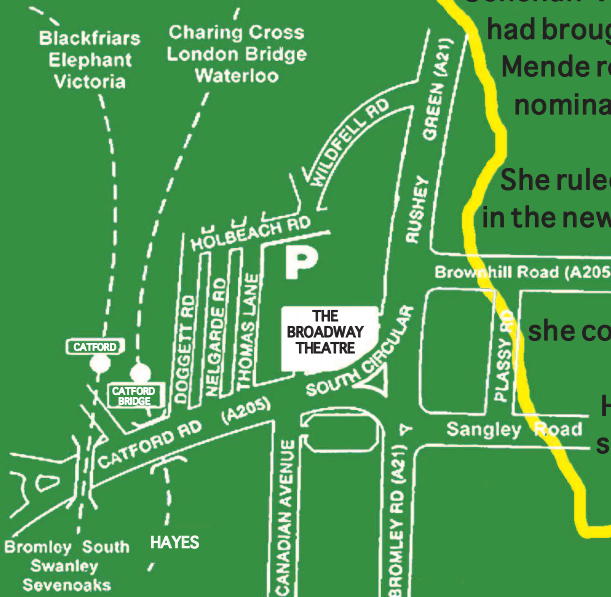

Yoko became the wife of Gbenjei, Chief of Taiama; and although she was barren, Gbenjei made Yoko his head wife.

In 1875, she saved her husband from a long imprisonment under the British by making a personal appeal to the Governor, who was charmed by her beauty and feminine graces. Afterwards, Gbanya used Yoko in diplomatic missions to the British and to other chiefs.

In 1884 Yoko became the "Queen of Senehun". Within a few years, she had brought all of the Kpaa Mende region under her nominal control.

She ruled as a Paramount Chief in the new British Protectorate until 1906, when it appears that she committed suicide.

Her reasons still unclear.

THE BROADWAY Theatre

CATFORD BROADWAY, SE6 4RU TEL: 020 8690 0001